Community Overview:

Purchased in 1981 for $795,500, the community was operated "as is," while U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development rental assistance and mortgage insurance applications were processed. Rehabilitation was completed in 1983. In 2003, Wesley Housing restructured the financing of the property, buying out its for-profit partner. Additional renovations were completed in 2005.

Located in the Buckingham neighborhood of Arlington County, the garden apartments are comprised of three-story brick buildings surrounding fully landscaped, brick-paved courtyards.

Resident Services:

Residents enjoy access to Whitefield Commons' Community Resource Center, which hosts free educational classes, after-school homework help for youth, and more.

The purpose of the Center is to provide residents of Whitefield Commons, Knightsbridge Apartments, and the Buckingham community quality, culturally sensitive educational opportunities, social services, and access to community resources that encourage economic and social self-sufficiency.

The Center launched the Housing Stability Initiative in 2011. Adult education programs include computer skills training, life skills, financial literacy, employment and job search skills. Youth programs include after school tutoring and enrichment activities, reading program, and summer camp. Other services include referrals to social services and information, and assistance on immigration issues.
